Your AI can draft a quotation in seconds. Can it check whether the price is still valid?
On 20 October, SnapLogic announced new capabilities for building AI agents and connecting them to enterprise systems, including 545 prebuilt tool patterns across 44 technologies.
For businesses considering AI automation, the useful takeaway is integration.
Consider a customer enquiry. Preparing a reliable response may require:
• Current pricing from one system.
• Availability from another

A vehicle fault alert is useful. What happens next determines its business value.
On 19 October, Motive announced AI Agents for fleet operations. One described workflow can interpret a vehicle fault code, create a maintenance work order and mark the vehicle out of service when company-defined criteria are met.
The important detail: today, teams define the conditions and actions. Broader goal-based capabilities are planned for early 2027.
For logistics businesses, this raises a practical question:
How many operational alerts still depend on someone copying information, making calls ... more
